

Trial and test top candidates

Our Technology Programme (NPP) equips candidates with the most sought after qualifications, skillset and accreditations ready to excel within an entry level role in IT.

Technology programme

What is the Technology Programme?

The Technology Programme provides candidates, who have the drive to progress in IT, with not only internationally recognised certifications from Comp TIA, Microsoft and Cisco, but also the necessary soft, commercial and technical skillset and training to step into an entry-level support role and start to develop their IT career.

Why do our candidates stand out?

Since 2001 our Technology Programme (which is called Network Professional Programme to our candidates) has equipped entry-level IT candidates with both the skillset and technical training that you won't find in other junior candidates. We achieve this through a mix of learning styles and tailored modules which include all of the current in-demand skills that are necessary to succeed within the fast-moving tech industry.

Our candidates also fund their own training due to their passion for IT. They are focused and energised on developing their IT career, rather than generic job seekers.

Without risk

Do you feel hesitant and uncertain when hiring for entry-level support roles? Our work placement scheme removes the risks and allows you to secure the best junior candidate.

Once candidates have finished the NPP you have the opportunity to interview and find the right candidate for your company. Placements typically last between weeks but this is dependent on your business needs and will be agreed by both yourself and the candidate before the placement begins.

The placements are free from obligation and can be terminated if it is not working between both parties, with the option to hire a new placement. Our team will be on-hand to monitor throughout the process so you are not left to deal with any issues alone. If the placement is successful, a permanent position can be offered, subject to a fee.
